Biography

Sheila Mojtehedhi is a commercial litigator with experience in state and federal courts. Her passion for strategizing persuasive legal and factual arguments have led to favorable rulings on complex and novel issues across different subject matters. For example, Ms. Mojtehedhi persuaded the District Court in a securities fraud matter to permit retroactive service of process through social media, which the court observed was the first decision of its kind. In a business dispute, she defeated a motion to compel all documents related to her client's merger with Banc Home Loans, saving her client thousands of dollars. In a criminal matter described as the largest healthcare fraud in California's history, she convinced the District Court to altogether decline to award restitution. She obtained summary adjudication and judgment on the pleadings for a general contractor and its CEO, fast-tracking the case to final resolution. Outside of court, her favorite part of practice is time spent with clients.

Ms. Mojtehedhi attended the University of California Irvine School of Law. In addition to numerous academic awards, she externed for the Honorable Alex Kozinski of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and won first place and best advocate in the law school's trial advocacy competition.

Ms. Mojtehedhi teaches trial advocacy as a lecturer at the University of California Irvine and is a board member and the chapter Secretary for the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of Women in Defense, a nonprofit professional organization that cultivates and supports the advancement and recognition of women in all aspects of national security.
